Former premier Rodney MacDonald speaks with the media yesterday after announcing that he was stepping down as leader of the Progressive Conservative party. Colchester North MLA Karen Casey has taken over as interim leader.

Interim leader Karen Casey first woman to head N.S. Tories

PAUL MCLEOD

Former Premier Rodney MacDonald stepped down yesterday, making room for the first ever female leader of the Nova Scotia Progressive Conservatives.

Karen Casey has been named interim party leader, winning unanimous support from her colleagues at a caucus meeting yesterday. She was the only one to put her name forward.

Casey, the MLA for Colchester North, handled some of the high-profile portfolios in MacDonald's minority government, including health and education.

It was in education Casey became most well-known. In 2006 she famously fired the Halifax Regional School Board due to infighting and appointed Howard Windsor to take over. In 2008 she disbanded the Strait Regional School Board for similar reasons.

Casey now has the job of rebuilding the party until a permanent leader is chosen.

"The first thing I'm going to do is to tour the province and talk to the people who cast their ballots at every election and let them know we are a party who are interested in Nova Scotians and interested in hearing what they have to say," Casey said to reporters.

"I think that's the important thing, is that I'm pre-

One-day sitting

• The Nova Scotia legislature will resume today for a special one-day sitting beginning at noon to elect presiding officials and establish committees of the House of Assembly. pared to listen."

MacDonald expressed no regrets about stepping down, and wished Casey the best of luck.

"I've thoroughly enjoyed my time as leader. But it is time to move on to the next leader," MacDonald said. "Again, I have no reservations about the last three-and-a-half years."

MacDonald will continue to serve as MLA for Inverness and said he has "no intentions of going anywhere."

Yarmouth MLA Richard Hurlburt was rumoured to be pursuing the interim leader job. But in the end he did not put his name forward. A Metro Halifax reporter saw Hurlburt as he left the caucus office and asked if he had a moment to comment on the leadership.

"No," he responded, without stopping.

Game on for next PC leader

POLITICS With Rodney MacDonald now gone, the Progressive Conservatives have to get around to picking a permanent replacement.

Karen Casey was named interim leader yesterday, but was vague about whether she wanted to lead the party into the next election.

"There will be a decision made by the PC party at their (annual general meeting) as to when there will be a leadership convention and my intentions will be made known then," she said.

No one has publicly stated their desire to take over, but there are many possible contenders.

Aside from Casey, former health minister Chris d'Entremont is considered a strong candidate.

Former justice minister Cecil Clarke's name has also been tossed around, although the debacle over mistaken prisoner releases earlier this year could hurt his chances.

The Tories could look outside their caucus. One obvious candidate is Halifax Regional Municipality Mayor Peter Kelly. Kelly has not publicly confirmed he is seeking the Tory job, though he has admitted to thinking about it. He has already been fundraising this year, despite just winning a new term as mayor last fall.

Serial drunk driver pleads not guilty

PHILIP CROUCHER
philip.croucher@metronews.ca

DARTMOUTH A serial drunk driver pleaded not guilty yesterday to his latest charge of impaired driving and will go to trial on Oct. 16.

Terry Naugle, a 51-year-old from the Truro region, has well over 20 convictions for drunk driving offences, and is now before the court again facing new charges of impaired driving, refusing a breathalyzer, failing to stop at the scene of an accident and driving while disqualified.

He was arrested on March 28 in connection with a hit-and-run accident on Highway 102 near Enfield.

Naugle's 10-minute appearance in Dartmouth provincial court yesterday was his fourth time before a judge on these latest charges.

Naugle has been remanded since being arrested, which he consented to again yesterday as he now waits for trial.

Naugle asked for a trial by judge and that will take place in Dartmouth. The trial is expected to last one day.

Teens seek to end school violence

Nine concerned students ask for help at board meeting

KRISTEN LIPSCOMBE
kristen.lipscombe@metronews.ca

A group of Dartmouth-area teens are hoping to shed their school's reputation as "riot high" and made it clear last night they won't take no for an answer.

Nine determined students showed up at a Halifax Regional School Board meeting to seek help in solving the violence problem at Cole Harbour District High School, even though they had been dropped from the already busy agenda.

But before students had a chance to hold a protest outside board chambers in downtown Dartmouth, members voted to hear what they had to say after all. Both Cole Harbour and nearby Auburn Drive High faced their fair share of violence this year, including brawls that broke out at both schools in May, leading to several student arrests.

But Courtney Loughran, 17, told the school board it isn't just violence that's having a negative impact on all students. "There are many other disruptions and problems at our school," the Grade 11 student said. "It impairs our learning ability."

Loughran said concerned students want to see stronger enforcement of school rules, including consistent use of positive effective behaviour supports, commonly called PEBS. The students even started up a Facebook group to promote their cause.

"The majority of the student body at CHDHS is afraid," reads a post on the social networking site.

Loughran said students have approached everyone from Carole Olsen, superintendent of schools, to Mayor Peter Kelly and provincial politicians in an attempt to come up with a solution to ongoing conflicts.

"You're feeling a lack of respect among some students so your learning is being disabled," commented area representative Gina Conrod, pointing to an anti-bullying program called Step Up that could help.

After her presentation, Loughran said she she's hopeful Cole Harbour District High will become a happier place, with some much-needed work. "I want to know it's going to be a safe place for my (younger) brother to go."

Board budget set

The Halifax Regional School Board staffers who crunched the numbers may say they've come up with a "status quo" budget, but chairman Irvine Carvery said yesterday there will be cutbacks.

"When you go status quo, you're slipping back," Carvery said last night after board members approved close to $389.5 million worth of public school spending for the 2009-10 year.

"We need to see continual progress in the area of student achievement."

In addition to agreeing with how provincial and federal government money will be spent next year, the school board also approved close to $19 million in supplementary funding from HRM, for a total budget of about $408.4 million.

That means the school board has balanced its books with a slight increase over last year's budget, but Carvery said teachers and students will feel the squeeze come September.

Richard Morris, director of financial services, told members the province has pulled back on initiatives for all boards, including cuts to a textbook credit and literacy-improvement programs.

Man dies after car collides with logging truck

CRASH All firefighters saw as they approached a fatal collision early yesterday morning in Thorburn was a wall of flames.

Diesel, which spilled across Highway 104 when a Ford Escort collided with a fully loaded logging truck, had ignited following the crash, creating a wall of fire between the two vehicles.

A call came in shortly after 5 a.m. to the Pictou RCMP detachment, alerting the police as well as firefighters from Thorburn, Plymouth and New Glasgow of the crash.

"All they saw was this blaze of fire," said RCMP Sgt. Phil Oliver.

A 25-year-old Pictou County man died in the crash after the car he was driving hit the logging truck head-on. The deceased, whose name has not yet been released, had to be cut free from the Ford Escort using the Jaws of Life.

The car was headed towards Cape Breton when it veered over the centre lane and struck the logging truck going to New Glasgow.

The male operator of the logging truck was rescued from the cab and taken to hospital in New Glasgow for treatment of minor injuries. He was later released.

Traffic was detoured on Highway 104 between Exits 25 and 26 into yesterday evening as the scene was cleaned up.

Oliver said police still have no idea what caused the crash.

Brown brings her diverse style to Multicultural Fest

Canadian songstress to take the stage this weekend

kristen.lipscombe@metronews.ca

From this weekend's Multicultural Festival in Dartmouth, where she'll share the stage with crooners Paula Cole and Sarah Slean to the Cisco Bluesfest in Ottawa next month, where she'll perform alongside rocker Joe Cocker, Divine Brown is all over the map.

And that's exactly the way she likes it.

"My album is a diverse album, so I don't really discriminate in terms of who I might ... match myself up with on a lineup," the Juno award-winning vocalist told Metro Halifax earlier this week. "I dig all styles of music."

Her passion for what she calls "dabbling" in different musical styles becomes immediately apparent when you push play on her latest release and take in all 13 tracks, from first single Lay It On The Line to the catchy hidden tune Dirty Day.

Canadian music star Divine Brown is performing this Friday night as part of the 25th annual Multicultural Festival, which is running through Sunday.

"The album, The Love Chronicles, is about taking you on a trip through different periods of soul music and R&B, with elements of pop," a raspy-voiced Brown said from a Toronto salon, a day after attending the MMVAs and a day before filming her new video for '80s-inspired Sunglasses.

"It starts from the late

'50s right up into contemporary times," she explained. "It's sort of meant to be versatile because I'm a versatile singer."

"Versatile" is the perfect word to describe Brown, who has a five-octave vocal range and will be all over the country this summer, stopping by Toronto's Pride Fest, the Calgary Stampede and many other events

Supershow 2009

• The Multicultural Festival presents Supershow 2009 tomorrow starting at 8 p.m. on Alderney Landing. Grammy Award winner Paula Cole is headlining, Canadian band MIR is hosting, while both Divine Brown and Sarah Slean are performing. Tickets are $32 in advance or $40 at the gate, plus tax.

along the way.

Brown is perhaps best known for radio friendly single Old Skool Love, a song from her self-titled album that she performed at the 2006 Junos, the last time she breezed in and out of Nova Scotia's capital city. This time she's performing at Alderney Landing, an outdoor venue nestled on Halifax's famous harbour.

"I love outdoor festivals and I also prefer more of an intimate vibe," she said. "It's summer and people are in a really feel-good head space."

Check out the food, tunes at festival

MULTICULTURAL You will be well fed at the 25th annual Multicultural Festival in Dartmouth, an event spokesman assures those planning to stop by this weekend's popular summer event.

In addition to enough food to fill your belly, there will also be an ample supply of music and dance, promises communications and fundraising co-ordinator Rae-Ann Kublick, with 30 different cultures represented.

sented.

The festival kicks off tomorrow night with the SuperShow on Alderney Landing, featuring Grammy award winner Paula Cole of Dawson's Creek theme song fame, along with Canadian singers Divine

Brown and Sarah Slean.

"The big concert is something new," Kublick said. "It's a centrepiece of the celebration."

Friday's musical extravaganza on Dartmouth's waterfront will be followed by Saturday's opening ceremonies and performances that will shine the spotlight on music and dance from around the world.

Saturday performers will dance, sing and more as residents and visitors alike can take in worldly cultural sights and sounds.

The opening ceremonies at 5 p.m. will formally usher in the festival and following that there will be a dance extravaganza featuring styles such as Lebanese, Chinese, Scottish and Egyptian.

"The festival has built a loyal following over the years and everyone I've spoken to is very excited about it," Kublick said.

Drum!, the musical experience that focuses on Nova Scotia cultures and rhythm, is going nationwide — again.

The show which features musical styles from Aboriginal, Acadian, African and Celtic cultures will be the opening act for Canada Day celebrations on Parliament Hill in Ottawa before about 100,000 people.

The event will also be shown live on CBC starting at 1 p.m.

Jeremiah Sparks is a performer with Drum! and was wearing a traditional African costume for the announcement made at Park Lane Cinema in Halifax. He said he was excited to perform for Canada.

"We did it last year and had a great time," he said. "It's definitely a spectacle to be a part of."

Drum! will also be having a short live performance run at the Rebecca Cohn Theatre starting in October. They will be collaborating with Symphony Nova Scotia for a few of the performances and Sparks is looking forward to mixing in another musical style.

"That's going to be absolutely gorgeous," he said. "The more people that we add the more it brings us together, and adding the symphony is going to take it to a whole other level."

Erika Beatty is the CEO of Symphony Nova Scotia and said they still need to work with the director of Drum! to figure out how the compilation shows will work.

"Some members of the orchestra may be on stage," she said.

"We don't really know all the details at this point, but that's part of the fun."

Drum! will also be performing in Milwaukee for the Irish Festival in August. The festival is one of the largest festivals in North America with audiences close to 125,000 people.

Watch it again

- On Tuesday the first-ever Drum! DVD goes on sale in selected stores. It will be available on their website drumshowstore.com for $25.

The 15-year-old Dartmouth youth is also charged with breach of probation and breach of recognition.

Maritimers go to uni in droves

The Maritime provinces' reputation for having a high university participation rate got solid support from a report released yesterday.

The Maritime Provinces Higher Education Commission's report University Participation: A Maritime Perspective, found universities in the region attract high numbers of students from within and outside the Maritimes, and a high proportion of Maritime youth (age 18-24) go to university here or elsewhere in Canada.

Measuring the proportion of the population that enrolls in university is an important method for governments, universities, and the public to get a sense of whether qualified students have access to a university education. It is also a marker of future economic prosperity, given its link to future educational achievements.

Over the past 25 years, overall participation in Maritime universities has more than doubled to 34 per cent, eight points greater than the national average. Overall participation rates by province were: Nova Scotia, 39 per cent; Prince Edward Island, 25 per cent; and New Brunswick, 28 per cent.

Salvation Army keeps on growing

Bigger Spryfield family resource centre will help serve the community better

Sunny Side

LESLEY PIKE
for Metro Halifax

Captain Jim Mercer talks proudly about the Salvation Army and its open-door policy for people.

And with a newer, much bigger location now opened in Spryfield, that door could be welcoming even more.

"There's an open door welcome for the community regardless of what background you come from — regardless of what socio-economic status you fall into, or ethical background," Mercer, pastor of the Spryfield Salvation Army Church, said yesterday. "It doesn't matter."

Mercer is actually say-

Captain Jim Mercer stands inside the new Salvation Army Family Resource Centre in Spryfield in front of a painting by local artist Tina Fluke yesterday.

ing goodbye to the community. Next week he moves to Orillia, Ont. with his family to work at another church.

He's worked in Spryfield for the past seven years and has seen the local Salvation Army go from a small church location on a hill to the brand new and much larger Spryfield Family Resource Centre on the Herring Cove Road.

The new building is a "one stop shop", Mercer said. Besides a church the facility has a kitchen, playrooms for children and rooms for different classes. Mercer said classes would include cooking, anger management, literacy, skill training and budgeting, to name a few. He said there has been a big response from the community about the new location that opened June 10.

"People say that's what Spryfield needs," Mercer said.

They are certainly seeing recognition for their work. Yesterday the Spryfield division of the Salvation Army received a certificate of commendation from the Halifax Regional Municipality for their work during the forest fire in the Spryfield area this spring.

The award was given at a celebration inside the neighbouring RBC, which is one of the many local companies that donated money to help build the new facility, as yesterday they presented the group with a $40,000 cheque.

Spryfield resident Wendy Liggins saw the efforts of the Salvation Army first hand. She was evacuated from her house during the devastating forest fire, and spent some time at a shelter at the Captain William Spry Community Centre, which the Salvation Army helped run.

"This community just cannot do without them. They really can't," she said. "They more than had our backs."

Store owners mad over tax hike

CIGARETTES Some convenience store operators are crying foul over the latest increase in taxes on cigarettes in the province.

A five cent hike per cigarette went into effect at midnight Tuesday. That's an additional $1.25 for a pack of smokes and an increase of $10 for a carton of cigarettes, which holds eight packs of 25 cigarettes each.

"The prices of cigarettes are already on the highest level in Canada," said Masood Chaudhry, who manages the Canadian Tire gas bar on Victoria Road in Sydney.

"The prices of cigarettes are already on the highest level in Canada."

Masood Chaudhry, gas bar manager

He said the tax hike is only contributing to the increased demand for contraband cigarettes that are smuggled into the province.

The new NDP government increased the cigarette tax after the previous Tory government attempted to do the same but was defeated on a budget bill in early May.

It's a move that's expected to raise $21 million in this fiscal year.

Chaudhry said fewer customers buying cigarettes at his store will result in poor sales, which is particularly important because cigarettes make up the bulk of a convenience store's revenue.

"When they find the $1.25 increase is there, they will find a way definitely. They will not go to a store. They'll say, 'OK, switch over to the illegal (cigarettes).'"

Sydney tar ponds clean up to launch project into full gear

CONTRACTS The Sydney Tar Ponds Agency is about half-way through the 10-year cleanup of the coke ovens and tar ponds sites, but less than one-fifth of the budget has been spent.

Those numbers are expected to change later this year as several large contracts are awarded, including the largest one — expected to be about $50 million — for the solidification and stabilization of the former industrial lands.

Several smaller projects, including capping of the former cooling pond and construction of the materials handling facility, have been completed or are underway. Recently, roads have been built around the tar ponds and work on the sites should be steady now for the next five years.

A contract for $37.6 million was recently awarded to MB2 Construction and Beaver Marine.

Since the cleanup's start in April 2004, the overall project has cost $71,187,657, or 18 per cent of the $400-million budget, and has generated almost 390 full-time equivalent jobs.

Soprano undergoes heart surgery

International opera star Measha Brueggergosman underwent emergency surgery in Toronto last week, her family told CBC News Online. The Fredericton-born soprano suffered a life-threatening tear in her aorta. Brueggergosman was taken to a hospital emergency room from her home last Tuesday when she wasn't feeling well. She recently achieved a dramatic weight loss of about 150 pounds, which she said was a result of Bikram yoga.

First Nations declare emergency in flu's wake

Flu-stricken Manitoba First Nations communities have declared a state of emergency in the wake of the federal government's response to the swine flu pandemic.

Chief David Harper said he hopes the move will make Ottawa understand the gravity of the situation, given how many aboriginal people in the province are positive for influenza A (H1N1), also known as swine flu.

"We have declared a state of emergency based on the fact ... that preparations for combatting the H1N1 virus are very slow and we are still getting results of positive cases," said the chief for the Garden Hill First Nations, about 550 kilometres northeast of Winnipeg, near the Ontario border.

Harper said even the most basic precaution against spreading germs, such as regularly washing hands, is impossible in some reserves where the majority of residents don't have running water.

"We are calling on the federal health minister (Leona Aglukkaq) and every minister responsible for this crisis to come forward and state who is taking the lead role here and explain what is happening," he said.

It was revealed this week Health Canada had delayed sending alcohol-based liquid hand-sanitizers to some First Nations communities for fear some residents might drink it.

Harper said the fact these communities couldn't even get hand sanitizers — with or without alcohol — is making native leaders question whether the federal government even has a pandemic plan for First Nations reserves.

Abdelrazik planning return this weekend

Lawyer worries something could go wrong after ordeal

Abousfian Abdelrazik plans to fly home to his family this weekend after being stranded at the Canadian Embassy in Sudan for more than a year.

But Hameed said Abdelrazik is still nervous that something could go wrong after hitting so many earlier bumps in the road on the way to the end of a six-year ordeal that included imprisonment in Sudan and, allegedly, torture.

War of words rages over gang legislation

COURTS What began in Parliament eight years ago as an attempt to combat organized crime has given way to a war over words in an Ontario courtroom, where two members of the Hell's Angels are challenging Canada's anti-gang law.

Chaps on "motor bikes" was the term one defence lawyer used in describing Steven "Tiger" Lindsay and Raymond Bonner before their case wrapped up yesterday in the Ontario Court of Appeal. At their extortion trial four years ago, a Superior Court judge declared the Hell's Angels a criminal organization.

Justice Michelle Fuest convicted Lindsay and Bonner of extortion under anti-gang legislation introduced in 2001. It allows courts to impose up to 14 additional years in prison on anyone who commits a serious crime "for the benefit of, at the direction of or in association with a criminal organization." Philip Campbell, a lawyer representing Lindsay, argued the legislation was so broadly worded it could apply to Canadians convicted of minor crimes.

Jim, right, and Cheng, from New York City, are hoping New York state legalizes gay marriage so they can get married in front of their friends and family.

Faces of the U.S. fight

GRAHAM WOOD
Metro World News

Sometimes people think gay couples want to get married just to say they did it and scoff in the faces of those who oppose their right to do so. But there's a unique story behind every gay couple. Metro introduces you to three different couples with very different experiences:

NEW YORK Jim and Cheng — they did not want to use their last names — fell in love the first night they met to watch one of pop culture's most iconic love stories.

"Sex and the City, of course," Jim said. It's been a year since that night, and the couple wants to be married in front of friends and family. That may happen since New York will soon decide whether to legalize gay marriage. But if it does, there's one thing it won't grant.

Cheng is from Taiwan and in the U.S. on a visa, and the Defense of Marriage Act prohibits federal recognition of gay marriages.

BERKELEY, CALIF. Simma Lieberman and Sandra Michele Brown never understood the hoopla over gay marriage. They would go to partnership ceremonies for other gay couples, and it just didn't make sense to them.

"We thought it was just gay people trying to be accepted by the outside world," said Lieberman. But when Brown died of a heart attack at the age of 53, Lieberman didn't have any legal right over her body or her belongings, nor to say good-bye before she was cremated. "I had to get permission from her brother to do all that," Lieberman said. "The crematorium had to get his verbal permission."

SAN FRANCISCO Frank McGinness' wedding ceremony wasn't quite what he had imagined. It was mid-2008, and San Francisco had just started issuing marriage licenses to same-sex couples. Opposition to the move was building, and Proposition 8 — denying gays the right to marry in California — was going to be placed on the ballot in November.

"We thought we could wait for families and friends to be available to attend our marriage," McGinness said. "But we had (to rush) ... in case Prop 8 passed." It turned out none of their family members were able to make it to their impromptu ceremony at San Francisco's city hall.

Scotland sets ambitious goal

ENVIRONMENT Scottish lawmakers yesterday backed a binding goal to cut greenhouse gases by 42 per cent by 2020 from 1990 levels, edging Germany into second place in a ranking of the most ambitious developed world targets.

Developing countries have demanded that rich nations take the lead in fighting climate change. They have so far been unimpressed with plans which show big gaps must be bridged to agree a global treaty in December to replace the Kyoto Protocol.

Scotland's bill included an option to curb its ambition if no strong global climate deal is reached in six months' time.

Environmental campaigners nevertheless hailed the decision by Scotland, which has ample po-

Pride starts adding up

Relating

Steve Collins

metronews.ca/collins

With pride weeks underway, en route to Canada Day, it's possible to conflate Pride and patriotism.

To the south, the Obama administration has extended benefits to same-sex couples working for the federal government — except, presumably, in the military, where the old “don't ask don't tell” policy is still in place.

Members of the Canadian Forces participated in Toronto's Pride Parade for the first time last year.

Of course, this year, you can bet Prime Minister

Stephen Harper will uphold the long-established prime ministerial tradition of skipping the parade.

Paul Martin once begged off citing a “scheduling conflict.”

No other PM has even bothered to make an excuse.

There is still much to celebrate here, where same-sex marriage was legalized four years ago now, putting the activist group Canadians for Equal Marriage out of business.

A lot of things have changed. Me, for example.

I went to high school in a small town in the 1980s. There were no openly gay kids. We'd never heard the word homophobia, and we knew a lot of gay jokes, but no gay people.

Except Mr. G, the math teacher, who you might expect to be in for a world of mockery from his spotty and unevolved charges, at least behind his back. But he wasn't. Whip-smart, funny and patient, he was a student favourite.

Small place that it was, my dad had taught Mr. G math, and remembered him as a struggling student. Maybe knowing what it felt like not to have the answer was what made him such an exceptional teacher, which he undoubtedly was.

He also bonded with some students over a mutual love of heavy metal, which we, for some reason, thought was very straight music indeed. (The possibility incredibly never crossed our minds that Rob Halford, the singer of Judas Priest, who performed in Pride-is-sue biker leathers, was gay.)

The headbangers would vacate the smoking area and pile into a classroom after school for sessions of what was known as the “Cultural Society.” Mr. G's regular screenings of metal videos on the school's AV equipment.

When I talk to some of the guys from school today, it's noticeable how much their attitudes have mellowed towards same-sex marriage, and gays and lesbians in general. Some of this can be attributed to changing times, and some to the shocking onset of adulthood, but I think it all started with Mr. G — teacher, rocker, and all 'round great gay dude.

So, happy Pride Week, Mr. G, though I still stink at math.

Right to full-body veil not a matter of religion

Mona Eltahawy

Guest Columnist

The full-body veil, called the burqa or niqab, terrifies me.

I'm a Muslim woman who defends a woman's choice to wear a headscarf — I wore one for nine years — but I will never defend the niqab. It embodies the erasure of a woman's identity.

And so I agreed with French President Nicolas Sarkozy when he said the burqa wasn't welcome in France because it “is not a religious sign, it's a sign of subservience.”

I would add the niqab doesn't belong anywhere, neither in countries where Muslims are a minority nor in a Muslim-majority country like Egypt, my country of birth.

An argument I had on the Cairo subway — while I still wore a headscarf — with a woman who wore niqab helped seal for good my rejection of the niqab.

She asked me why I did not wear the niqab. I pointed to my headscarf. “Isn't this enough?”

“If you wanted a piece of candy, would you choose an unwrapped piece or one that came in a wrapper?” she asked.

“I'm not candy,” I answered. “I'm a woman.”

I retell that argument often because it shows the niqab isn't about the “West” versus “Islam.”

Many will accuse Sarkozy of hating Muslims, but that would be to concede that the burqa is religiously mandated, as extremists believe. Many Muslim scholars have clearly described the niqab as an old Bedouin tradition that was not required by the Quran, the Muslim holy book.

To connect the niqab with Muslim women is inaccurate because only a small minority wears it.

Hearing Muslims argue over the burqa is the best way to disarm the Islamophobic right wing in Europe and in North America and their crocodile tears for Muslim women. We don't care for their “support” and yet — to fight Islamophobia — we must not silently watch extremists erase Muslim women out of existence.

That's where “it's about the economy, stupid!”

France is home to Western Europe's largest population of Muslims, estimated at about five million. Many complain of discrimination and blame the French government for inaction. It was good to hear Sarkozy also say that France's integration model wasn't working any more because it doesn't give immigrants and their French-born children a fair chance. That's the best way to fight extremists and the niqab they promote. The majority of Muslims in France are more concerned with poverty and unemployment than with the niqab.

Firms testing TV on the web

Time Warner Inc. and Comcast Corp. have banded together to test ways to allow people to watch more TV shows over the web, while making sure they keep paying for their traditional cable or satellite TV services.

The partnership by two major media companies underscores the pressure the TV industry is under to protect its revenue but also satisfy consumers who want to watch their favourite drama or comedy at a time and place of their choosing.

Time Warner and Comcast are banking on an approach that would essentially let viewers see any show at any time over any sort of device they wanted — whether that is a TV set,

U.S. economy has 'no bounce': Buffett

NEW YORK Warren Buffett said yesterday that the U.S. economy has "no bounce" and will take time to recover, but there is no risk of deflation to push it further into despair.

On CNBC television, the world's second-richest person also praised Washington's efforts to jump-start economic activity.

He lamented that the slowdown has hurt his insurance and investment company Berkshire Hathaway Inc., which runs close to 80 businesses and in the

But, he added: "I don't worry about deflation at all."

NORWAY Norwegian oil and gas group StatoilHydro is trying to reverse a ban on the sale of alcohol at gas stations in Lithuania, claiming it may lead to layoffs. The ban on selling alcohol at night came into effect on Jan. 1, after which accidents linked to alcohol have dropped by 45 per cent in January-May compared with the same period last year, according to police data. StatoilHydro said the ban had led to a major drop in revenue, which could lead to automated stations and "massive layoffs". REUTERS

Bailout bank boosts salaries

Citigroup Inc. says it has to retain employees

Citigroup Inc., the troubled bank that accepted $45 billion US in bailout money, is raising salaries companywide.

It says it's an effort to retain employees and offset restrictions on bonuses.

According to people familiar with the plans, the changes mean some employees may be paid more and others less.

But overall compensation should remain unchanged as the higher salaries offset lower incentive payouts, the insiders say.

Citigroup also expects to issue new stock options to cushion a roughly 95 per cent drop in its stock price since late 2006, one of the sources said.

The changes may help the third-largest U.S. bank better control the risks it takes, by reducing the focus of investment bankers and

"Retaining and attracting the best talent is very important to the success of Citi and all its stakeholders."

Citigroup

traders on performance-related bonuses.

They follow the Obama administration's naming this month of Kenneth Feinberg as a special master to oversee pay practices at Citigroup and other companies that received "exceptional" federal aid.

Citigroup is in the process of a stock swap expected to give the government a 34 per cent ownership stake in the bank.

Lawmakers have attacked the payment of bonuses and other compensation they deem excessive to employees of companies that received government aid.

President Barack Obama himself has said bank pay packages encouraged excessive risk-taking, one cause of last September's near meltdown of the financial system.

"We got way overleveraged in the financial arena," billionaire investor Warren Buffett said on CNBC television.

"We do need something to address institutions where the wrong incentives are in place, their personal incentives are at real variance with what our national incentives should be."

Citigroup employs roughly 300,000 people.

Investment banking employees will be the first to see the changes. REUTERS

Bruins, Flyers set to face off at Fenway: Report

HOCKEY The NHL's third Winter Classic will be played between the Philadelphia Flyers and Boston Bruins at Fenway Park on Jan. 1, 2010.

It is being reported by the Trentonian that the league was trying to push for a Washington/Boston matchup at Fenway in order to feature two-time Hart Trophy winner Alex Ovechkin. However, NBC, who will broadcast the game, wanted the Flyers so as to draw a better television audience.

Boston finished this past season as the top seed in the Eastern Conference and had a 22-point improvement over the previous season. The team won four awards including the Vezina, Jack Adams and Norris trophies, but were bounced in the second round of the playoffs by the Carolina Hurricanes.

Meanwhile, Philadelphia went 44-27-11 in the regular season and finished fifth overall in the Eastern Conference, but were knocked out of the playoffs in the first round by the Pittsburgh Penguins, who went on to win the Stanley Cup.

Last season's Winter Classic featured the Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Blackhawks at Chicago's Wrigley Field. In the game, Jiri Hudler scored twice and added an assist as the Red Wings took a 6-4 win over the Blackhawks.

U.S. upsets Spain at Confederations Cup

SOCCER The United States scored its greatest win in almost 60 years by beating European champions Spain 2-0 yesterday to reach the final of the Confederations Cup.

Goals from Jozy Altidore and Clint Dempsey ended Spain's world record run of 15 successive victories and their 35-match unbeaten sequence, a world record streak they share with Brazil, and caused one of the biggest soccer upsets in years.

However, the match ended in bittersweet agony for U.S. coach Bob Bradley when his son Michael, who had a brilliant game in midfield, was sent off three minutes from time.

He was the third U.S. player sent off in the tournament and now misses Sunday's final against Brazil or hosts South Africa.

Overall though it was the best performance by the U.S. since they beat England 1-0 in the 1950

World Cup in Brazil.

It was also the first time the U.S. had beaten a team ranked No. 1 in FIFA's world rankings since they defeated Brazil in 1998.

The result was even more remarkable because the U.S. had lost its opening two group matches in the competition and was heading out until they beat Egypt 3-0 on Sunday and Brazil sank Italy by the same score as they squeezed through on the number of goals scored.

"That was a great team effort. To beat a team like Spain, it's big," coach Bradley told reporters.

Cincinnati 2 Toronto 8

BASEBALL Aaron Hill went 2-for-4 with a two-run homer and drove in three runs to lead the Toronto Blue Jays in an 8-2 rout of the Cincinnati Reds in the middle test of a three-game set from the Rogers Centre.

Vernon Wells and Adam Lind both went 2-for-4 with a homer and drove in a pair of runs for the Blue Jays, who have won three straight and six of eight overall. Scott Rolen drove in a run in the win while Marco Scutaro had a double and scored three times.

Scott Richmond (6-4) got the win after going seven innings and giving up two runs on as many hits.

Jonny Gomes had two of the four hits — including a solo homer — for the Reds, who have dropped four in a row. Jerry Hairston Jr. drove in the other run in the setback.

Bronson Arroyo (8-6) was roughed up for seven runs — six earned — on eight hits in 3½ innings.

Toronto got on the board in the first inning. Scutaro led off with a walk and crossed home as Hill followed with a homer. Wells kept it going with a solo blast and Rolen added a base hit. Lind then made it 5-0 with a shot over the fence in left field.

Gomes had a homer in the second to cut it to 5-1, but Wells' RBI double in the home half made it a five-run affair again.

Hairston had an RBI single to left-centre in the third to close it to 6-2. However, Rolen grounded into a fielder's choice to plate Scutaro in the fourth to again make it a five-run differential.

Hill's single off Carlos Fisher in the eighth scored Russ Adams to make it 8-2.

Maria Sharapova shows some emotion during her 6-2, 3-6, 6-4 second-round loss yesterday at Wimbledon.

Sharapova exits early

Maria Sharapova was heading for the airport after losing at Wimbledon yesterday while another former champion Roger Federer sauntered through to the third round in glorious sunshine after a clinical display.

Sharapova struggled on the Centre Court where she made her name in 2004 by beating Serena Williams to win the women's singles title as a 17-year-old. The Russian looked a pale shadow of the player who once looked set to dominate the game.

Bedevelled by shoulder problems since losing in the second round here last year, the 24th seed ran into inspired Argentine Gisela Dulko, falling 6-2, 3-6, 6-4 to a player she had dropped just three games against in their two previous clashes.

Sharapova lost the opening set in 35 minutes and despite some typically tenacious resistance to win the second from 0-3 the booming weapons that used to blast the Russian to safety in such situations failed to function at crunch time.

Dulko eventually prevailed on her fifth match point when Sharapova, who was bumped up the seedings from a world ranking of 60, fired a forehand long to end an absorbing scrap.

"It took me a while to get going," former world No. 1 Sharapova told reporters. "It's a little too late to start picking yourself up when you're down a set and 3-0."

Maria Sharapova

Referring to Federer as a former holder of the Wimbledon title he won five years in a row still takes some getting used to, but his form in a 6-2, 6-2, 6-4 win over Spain's Guillermo Garcia-Lopez suggests he will soon reclaim his throne.

Halifax native Steven Anthony hoping to be an NHL pick

matthew.wuest@metronews.ca

Steven Anthony hasn't gotten many pats on the back the past two years, but he's hoping for one Saturday.

The Halifax native — who once appeared destined for stardom — will put two long, difficult seasons with the Saint John Sea Dogs behind him if he hears his name called in the mid-to-late rounds of the NHL draft at Bell Centre in Montreal.

Anthony admittedly hasn't lived up to somewhat lofty expectations in the QMJHL, struggling with his confidence under Sea Dogs bench boss Jacques Beaulieu — a coach with a hard-nosed reputation — who was fired in the off-season.

"He's hard on some of his players ... He didn't give you positive feedback," Anthony says. "As a young kid, you've never had that before from a coach. You've always had positive coaching. I took it personally and got down on myself and that's my fault. But I've learned and become better for it."

The six-foot-two, 190-pound centre's offensive gifts have never been questioned. He was a scoring sensation with the Dartmouth Subways and his talent had him ranked by some scouts as the No. 1 prospect for the 2007 QMJHL draft.

But his mercurial competitive level has been a bone of contention with scouts for many years, even when he broke out in the second half last season with 30 points in the final 29 games. In 93 previous games, he had only produced 32 points.

"If he more consistently played his best game, he'd be in the top echelon of the draft," says Central Scouting director E.J. McGuire, who ranks An-

Halifax native Steven Anthony is hoping to be selected at the NHL draft this weekend.

Scout's notebook

Central Scouting director E.J. McGuire analyzes local NHL draft prospects. They are listed with position, QMJHL team, hometown (if from Nova Scotia) and CS ranking.

- G OLIVIER ROY, Cape Breton (second): "He's on the small side, but what he lacks in size he makes up with his quickness and athletic ability. He's a good goalie."

- G GABRIEL O'CONNOR, Halifax (180th): Recently traded but "makes a good first pass and few mistakes. He's a stay-at-home defence-man who plays with an edge."

- F MATT BROWN, Moncton (Bible Hill, 193rd): "He was injured last year (torn MCL) but he plays with confidence and energy and he's always a threat to score."

- F BRANDON MACLEAN, P.E.I. (Bedford, 186th): Low-scoring power-forward type is at his best when "he's taking hits to make plays and going out of his way to forecheck."

thony 184th among North Americans. "We'd be talking about him as a first-rounder."

Anthony, it seems, recognizes his criticisms.

"Scouts see I've got talent and I can play," Anthony says, "but it's game-inand game-out, not getting down on myself and playing focused and positive every game."

Talent alone might be enough to get Anthony drafted. And if the 18-year-old can learn from his past, the team that picks him could end up reaping the rewards in a few years.

"If I hadn't gone through the past two years, I probably wouldn't feel as prepared to make the next step as I am today," Anthony says. "Everything in the past is in the past."

Van Koeverden will miss selection trials

CANOE-KAYAK Former Olympic gold medallist Adam van Koeverden has injured his ankle and will not race in the Canadian sprint canoe-kayak selection trials on Lake Banook this weekend.

Van Koeverden, the country's most famous active paddler, is not expected to miss much time and should be healthy for August's world championships, also on Lake Banook.

The 27-year-old won a pair of medals at the 2004 Olympics — gold in the K-1 500 metres and bronze in the K-1 1,000. He also won silver in the K-1 500 last summer in Beijing and piled up four medals at World Cup events this spring.

Although van Koeverden won't be available for the trials, Lake Banook will be crawling with Olympians on Saturday and Sunday as a precursor to the worlds in August.

Thomas Hall, who won a bronze medal in the C-1 1,000 last summer in Beijing, is among them.

True North Diner a true dining experience

The True North Diner has some of the hallmarks you associate with a great diner — there's a simple, well-done menu, a jukebox nestled in the corner and an open kitchen where you can see your meal being cooked to perfection.

But besides the delicious food, spotless dining room and prompt, friendly service — what sold me on returning was the pie. This is when I truly realized the benefits of dining in a restaurant so committed to freshness that it doesn't even have a freezer.

Jim Macaulay and his wife Carol are the visionary duo behind of this new Bedford jewel. Macaulay just retired from Mount Saint Vincent University where he was professor of Tourism and Hospitality Management and the couple have been in the restaurant business for years.

"This is actually a great chance to practice what I've preached," he laughs. The diner started as a consulting project for the former professor over a year ago now. When it looked like the original owner was going to drop the project, the couple decided to take it on.

"I was retiring, and this was a great idea. We loved the location and the concept. We also felt there was room for a new family style restaurant in the area," he says. "Originally we thought our target market would be boomers and seniors who came for the nostalgia. In fact, the bigger market is little kids and families."

The diner opened in December, after three months of hard work and renovation of the former dark and tired Ponderosa restaurant. The first few months have been a good chance to try out their menu items and see what works.

"So far the response has been great and we have a lot repeat business. For those people who've never been before, our staff loves to watch them open the door, come in, look around and the first thing they do is smile.

"It brings home the past to an awful lot of people," he says. "It's just lots of fun."

Now to celebrate. The official opening is set for June 27 between 2 p.m. – 4 p.m. when there will be lots of free food, drinks, and prize give aways. On Saturday, the True North

Bright Future For WestJet

Despite the setbacks airlines around the world are currently facing, including a weakened demand for air travel as a result of the economic downturn, the skies are looking bright for WestJet.

Not only is the Calgary-based company the world's fourth most profitable airline on a percentage basis, but it continues to deliver on its strategic plan by expanding its network, growing its fleet of planes from 79 to 121 by 2013, and launching a frequent flyer program and code-sharing deals with Air France and KLM as well as others in the future.

These partnerships would allow the airlines to transfer their passengers onto one another's networks, allowing guests to book through travel and check their baggage directly through to their destination. They will also give WestJet guests access to a world of destinations.

While striving to continue offering its guests a friendly, efficient and relaxing experience, the company is also looking to become one of the top five most successful airlines in the world by 2016. And Sean our success."

WestJet's culture drives all of its decisions. The airline's recently introduced Care-anteer reinforces that its people truly go above and takes social responsibility as seriously as it does business. WestJet's culture of caring extends beyond its people and guests to the community at large through its WestJet Cares for Kids program. From organizing toy drives for children's hospitals in the communities it serves, to providing thousands of free flights to people who desperately need medical care, to partnering with 10 national children's charities like Kids Help Phone and Ronald McDonald House charities, WestJet is a firm believer in giving back. In fact, the company supports more than 800 community initiatives throughout Canada. In the face of the weakened global economy, it's clear that WestJet is en route to continued success.

"We keep expanding when everyone else is contracting, and we keep delivering an amazing guest experience"

Durfy, WestJet's CEO, says his airline is in a better position than most to get through the recession and achieve that goal.

"We keep expanding when everyone else is contracting, and we keep delivering an amazing guest experience," explains Durfy. "For us, our company culture is the key driver to beyond when it comes to taking care of its guests. From not overbooking flights to providing guests with meals and accommodations if flights are delayed or cancelled (even if it's Mother Nature's fault), the airline truly puts people first.

The low-cost airline also

COMPANY PROFILE: WEST JET

Sean Durfy became WestJet President in September 2006 and Chief Executive Officer in September 2007. As President and CEO, Sean is responsible for both the strategic direction of the company and the day-to-day operations of the airline, leading over 7,500 WestJetters as they deliver an exceptional guest experience.

Amid the global recession, weakening demand and bankruptcy notices by airlines around the world, the fact that WestJet has become the most profitable airline in North America on a percentage basis is a true testament to the success of its mandate: putting people first.

Since its inception in 1996 as a low-cost airline servicing Western Canada, WestJet has grown from a fleet of three planes to 79 – all Boeing 737 Next Generation – flying to 55 destinations across Canada, the U.S., Mexico and five Caribbean nations. Some of their most recent destination additions include San Francisco, San Diego, Sydney, Nova Scotia and Yellowknife, NWT, with more destinations planned in the near future.

Today, the Calgary-based company is run by an executive team of seven headed up by President and CEO Sean Durfy, 43. "We have a very simple motto," says Durfy, a native Newfoundlander. "If we, as a corporation, take care of our people, then our people will take care of our guests, and our guests will take care of our business."

One of the ways WestJet takes care of its people is through profit sharing. Just as that familiar refrain on their playful TV commercials says, "Why do WestJetters care so much? Because we're also WestJet owners," 83 per cent of their 7,500 staff own shares in the public company through an employee share purchase program.

WestJetters as they refer to themselves can designate up to 20 per cent of their salary to buy shares, which the company matches. Considering it's the fourth most profitable airline in the world on a percentage basis, with revenue of more than $2.5-billion in 2008, there's certainly incentive to invest.

But it's the unique culture that truly sets WestJet apart. Through its fun, friendly and caring WestJetters, they demonstrate that an airline can have exceptional operational performance, a world class guest experience and great value.

WestJet has always been on top of new trends and technologies. In fact, it was the first airline in North America to implement the electronic boarding pass and is the only airline in Canada to offer live seatback TV.

In keeping with the global concern over the environment, WestJet has made a concerted effort to lower emissions from its fleet of planes by investing billions to upgrade its fleet to be more fuel efficient. Today, WestJet proudly boasts one of the youngest, most modern and fuel-efficient fleets in North America.

WestJet is a true Canadian success story.

Cultivated for at least 5,000 years, mustard is the oldest condiment known to man and is the world's third most important spice after salt and pepper.

Did you know? Canada grows more than 90 per cent of the world's mustard seed — mostly in Saskatchewan, the real mustard capital of the world. Canada is also home to the largest and oldest mustard mill in the world.

Mustard is made from crushing the seeds of the mustard plant. The tiny seeds, about 250,000 per pound, are very pungent. On their own, they are bitter and biting. To make the condiment, the seeds are crushed into a powder and mixed with liquid (wine, vinegar, beer, water) and various spices, such as turmeric, to form a paste. Brown mustard has a dark brown seed coat and is used in Dijon-style mustards and also used in combination with yellow in English-style mustard.

Prepared mustards can range from mild yellow to very spicy mustards. No Canadian fridge is likely to be without at least one jar of this quintessential condiment. And it goes well beyond a hamburger and sandwich spread. Here are just a few suggestions:

- Mustard is a must with ham and wonderful with pork — combine equal amount of mustard with maple syrup or honey and brush on a ham or pork roast, tenderloin or chops near the end of baking or grilling.
- Brush spicy horseradish mustard on a beef roast, then press coarsely crushed black pepper into mustard before grilling.

Herb Mustard Sauce

This simple sauce is good with grilled salmon, asparagus or spooned over potatoes. Makes about 1/2 cup (125 ml).

INGREDIENTS:

- 2 tbsp (30 ml) butter
- 4 green onions, chopped
- 1 1/4 cup (60 ml) Dijon-style mustard
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) honey
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) fresh lemon juice
- 1 tsp (5 ml) dried tarragon leaves
- Salt and pepper

METHOD:

In a microwaveable bowl, combine butter and green onions. Microwave at High for 30 to 60 seconds to melt butter and soften onions. Stir in mustard, honey, lemon juice and tarragon. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

ROSE REISMAN

Asian Beef Lettuce Wraps with Peanut Sauce

I love the mu shiu served in Chinese restaurants. Minced pork, chicken or beef with hoisin sauce and vegetables is served in lettuce leaves or flour wraps. They're high in calories and fat due to extra oil and the fattier quality of the beef. These homemade ones taste great and they're leaner. The peanut sauce is made with light coconut milk.

INGREDIENTS:

- 2 tsp vegetable oil
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 1/2 cup diced carrot
- 3/4 cup diced red bell pepper
- 12 oz extra-lean ground beef
- 1/4 cup light coconut milk
- 2 Tbsp natural peanut butter
- 4 tsp low-sodium soy sauce
- 4 tsp rice wine vinegar
- 2 tsp sesame oil
- 1 1/2 tsp minced garlic

- 1 tsp honey
- 1 tsp sesame seeds
- 1 tsp minced fresh ginger
- 1/2 tsp hot Asian chili sauce
- 1/4 cup chopped cilantro or parsley
- 1/4 cup chopped green onions
- 8 large Boston or butter lettuce leaves

METHOD:

Spray a large non-stick skillet with cooking oil, add the vegetable oil and place over medium-high heat. Sauté the onion until browned, about 5 minutes. Add the carrot and bell pepper and sauté for another 8 minutes, until the vegetables are tender-crisp. Add the beef and sauté until no longer pink, about 4 minutes.

Combine the coconut milk, peanut butter, soy sauce, vinegar, sesame oil, garlic, honey, sesame seeds, ginger and chili sauce. Add to the beef mix-

National spirit

My wife gave me a cool whisky tasting glass made by Nova Scotia Crystal for our anniversary last week. Though no stranger to a splash or two of scotch, with Canada Day coming up I thought I owed it to the country to break it in with some of our own homemade spirits.

While Canada certainly has a reputation for making fine libations (think beer and wine) the fact that we create darn good whisky seems to have fallen off everyone's liquid radar.

Considering my new thistle-shaped receptacle has its origins in the Maritimes; filling it with a wee dram from our nation's only single malt whisky maker seemed poetic. Glen Breton Rare ($79.99 - $89.55) made by Cape Breton's Glenora Distillery is a light, heathery 10 year old with a relaxed, creamy flow of soft, sweet malt.

If you like your hard liquor with more oak-influenced flavour Danfield's Private Reserve Small Batch Whisky ($24.95 - $26.48) tastes like an American bourbon but with all the smooth, mouth-filling sweet grain character of a classic Canadian.

A touch of spring water added to each will help reveal more of their rich aromatics no matter what glass you choose to use.

Prices reflect the range across the country. Some products may not be available in all provinces.

Compliments of HONEY NUT CHEERIOS

THOSE DOG DAYS OF SUMMER

With winter's snow a distant memory, and the unpredictability of spring finally tamed, there's a collective sigh of relief: Summer has finally arrived. Here, the 10 best signs of summer:

1. Summer fun. Maybe it's the exposed skin, and the t-shirts and shorts, but there is a sense of energy and vitality that comes with being able to go outside without having to be bundled up against the elements.

2. Warmer days. The days may get slightly shorter after the arrival of summer — the longest day of the year — but it also heralds the official start of warm weather and that feeling that the worst of winter and spring is finally over.

3. Flowers burst to life. After the long dreary winter, gardens across Canada come alive with daffodils and tulips in full bloom, adding colour to our surroundings, and adding an intoxicating scent to the air.

4. Birdsong fills the air. You don't have to be a bird enthusiast to enjoy the songs of chickadees, cardinals, mockingbirds and sparrows that ring out at dawn and dusk.

5. Farmer's markets. Every summer, more weekly markets crop up across Canada, providing high quality, local produce that offers incomparable taste — and fresh from the field goodness.

6. Barbecue season starts. All across Canada, families start firing up their

There is a sense of energy and vitality that comes with being able to get out and enjoy the summer sun.

grills, cooking up delicious fare outdoors.

7. Patios open. Nothing says summer has arrived like the sight of sun-bathed diners enjoying an alfresco meal. When summer hits, sidewalk cafes are the place to be, as are those intimate courtyard dining spots.

8. Communities come alive. With warmer weather and longer days, communities reunite, as people get out walking, tend to their gardens and stop to chat with one another.

9. More people bicycle. You know it's summer when the roads and recreational trails team with bicycles. With the more temperate climate, people are more inclined to pedal their way to work.

10. Theatre festivals open. When summer arrives, actors take to stages across Canada — with outdoor festivals taking advantage of beautiful evenings and warm temperatures to draw audiences.

Offering women a new beginning

For many women in Toronto, Denise Whitter, founder of New Beginnings Support Program, is like a fairy godmother. Denise started the charity in 2003 to improve the lives of women and children in need by empowering women to become confident, self-sufficient, and employable. "We found women would get training and end up in minimum-wage jobs and still couldn't support their children," explains Denise. "I strongly believe women shouldn't have to choose 'Do I pay my rent, or feed my children.'"

The charity not only provides women with job coaching for fields like office administration, but also liaises with potential employers. Their annual fundraiser, Wedding Bliss, takes place on June 20 at the Ted Rogers School of Management in Toronto, where brides-to-be can pick out donated wedding gowns, worth thousands of dollars, for between $50 and $200.

There will also be a contest for 10 lucky women to win a free wedding gown. To enter, simply write a short essay on why you or a person you nominate have been a "local Angel" in the community and are deserving of a free wedding gown.

Breaking out the family fun

When it comes to quality family time, most people opt for going to the movies or renting one together. As fun as this is, watching a movie doesn't actually involve group interaction though. One activity that does create a great bonding experience for your entire brood is a games night.

So designate a specific night on the calendar, turn off the cell phones and the T.V., and get out the board games for some good old-fashioned family fun. Instituting a weekly games night for your family allows uninterrupted time together — an increasingly rare occurrence in our time-crunched lives.

There are a plethora of games to choose from including time-honoured favourites like Yahtzee, Scrabble, Chess and Monopoly.

Not only does a games night bring you closer together as a family unit through face-to-face interaction, but it teaches kids some basic life lessons in an informal way including co-operation and teamwork, honesty and playing fair, understanding and accepting both winning and losing, making choices and accepting the consequences, and patience. This is one family tradition that's sure to become an instant hit for years to come.

Looking for home decor inspiration? Let the sun be your muse. That's what interior designer Dawn Munden realized when she walked into the model suite at Hydrostone Place. Surrounded by huge windows, sunlight poured over the gleaming floors and shining countertops, giving the space a sense of tranquility. "I didn't want to do anything to the space that would take away that feeling," Munden explained. As the owner of Update Interiors, Munden set to work designing the model suite ensuring that everything she did would complement the open-concept living area.

She kept the furnishings light and airy, using neutral sofas and small rounded tables. With condos, Munden said it's important to keep scale in mind: furniture that's too large will overwhelm the space.

Though decorating in neutral tones help create a space that appeals to buyers, Munden said it's important to know when you need a pop of colour.

Munden said while the units are gorgeous, the building's most fab feature might just be "location, location, location." Though it's located just minutes from bustling Barrington Street, the neighbourhood maintains a quiet, European feel.

Available immediately, the remaining suites at Hydrostone Place range from 1,345 to 1,451 square feet, and cost between $287,746 and $303,620. See hydrostoneplace.com

PREMIERE MORTGAGE CENTRE

Though the home purchase market has been steady with both first-time and move-up buyers, it is the mortgage refinancing activity that is driving a significant portion of the marketplace at this time. It seems that everyone is looking to take advantage of the lower rates, and rightfully so, as interest savings can be significant over the life a mortgage.

"Mortgage Planning," what may seem like a buzzword in the financial industry has gained prominence as more people understand that their mortgage is a crucial component of their overall financial well-being. Together with your Mortgage Professional, you should be identifying the strategy that is right for your particular situation with an emphasis on short, medium and long-term financial goals in mind.

Today's mortgage market has numerous products and programs that can be customized to facilitate a tax-deductible mortgage strategy, optimum liability management, the purchase of a second home or an income-producing investment property; all of these may entail a different mortgage product.

It is time to think of your mortgage and home as more than a place where you create lasting memories. Your Mortgage Professional should not simply be an order taker but, rather, a key component in your wealth creation plans.

Modern roses exhibit the sensuality of their ancestors while offering the ease of care gardeners have long desired.

Written
by Judith
Adam, photography
by Jerry Pavia

Thirty years ago I bought my first roses, all mid-century hybrid teas such as Mister Lincoln and Oklahoma (both bred in 1964), with award-winning performance and big, lush blooms.

The summer passed in a conscientious flurry of preventive spraying schedules, precision-timed fertilizer applications and increasing dissatisfaction with the results.

Despite obsessive attention, these plants would not thrive. I didn't know my blue-ribbon roses were bred to produce exhibition-quality, large-petalled flowers at the expense of pest resistance and vigour. Every green aphid was a fanged monster on their tender tissues, each stray fungal spore ballooned into a colony of dreaded black spots. With more and better information I might have made different selections.

But as it was, my award winners all dwindled through the summer and met a wintry death. Since that season of discontent, much has been achieved in developing modern roses with inbred resilience to the harsh realities of climate and ecology. Plant breeders have turned their gene-mixing skills to developing beautiful roses that are repeat blooming, are able to persist through insect and disease problems, and grow vigorously. Easycare modern roses have long bloodlines carrying healthy genes from past centuries.

In recent years, I've grown the modern coral-pink climber America, a disease-resistant garden workhorse with the genes of 89 rose ancestors, dating back to 1859. Yellow-pink Morden Sunrise (Canadian bred in 1999) is another winner in my garden; thriving without winter protection and exposed to the west wind, it's not fazed by the usual hardships of budworms and leaf spots (though admittedly, Japanese beetles are entranced by the fragrance). Let you fear that high petal count, deep scent and voluptuous form have been sacrificed, have a look at the Austin English roses developed from classic antiques married to modern cultivars. Rose breeder David Austin's crimson red William Shakespeare 2000 is typical (if one can use that term to describe a masterpiece) of the lushly perfumed, full petal count, disease-resistant English roses that are both easy-care and modern.

Similarly, my container-grown, glowing pink floribunda Sexy Rexy (which enjoyed garage storage over the winter), hasn't sacrificed its classic double form in acquiring disease resistance. This season I'll be planting two favourites I call the party girls: Iceberg, a white floribunda; and Penelope, a pink hybrid musk — both with prettily frilled, semi-double petals like ballerina skirts, provocative stamen displays and clean foliage all summer.

How easy is it to grow modern roses? With their strengths, rose care is reduced to meeting basic needs. Choose a sunny site and provide loamy, well-drained soil (topsoil, peat moss, and sand in equal proportions) in the planting hole. Irrigate once weekly in the morning (more often during dry spells), allowing nine litres of water for each plant.

Soon, your garden will be primed for a party!

Winter conditions in northern gardens are severe; even a rose that can survive in your zone will benefit from winter protection.

The mortgage that you don't know you have

LegalMatters

metronews.ca/legalmatters

The number of people who naïvely claim that they don't have a mortgage always amazes me. Many clients do not appreciate when a mortgage is registered against their home.

In an age of extensive consumer protection laws and regulated banking, how do people end up with mortgages that they are unaware of? The answer lies in the fact that many consumers unknowingly use their homes as security for loans and lines of credit.

Unsecured borrowing occurs when no security is taken by the bank or finance company. The loan is offered to you based on your promise to repay it and the lender's confidence in your ability to repay. With secured borrowing, the lender has a legal charge, a mortgage, over your property.

If you do not make your payments, the lender could foreclose on the

With secured borrowing (such as a Home Equity Line of Credit) the lender has a legal charge, a mortgage, over your property. If you do not make your payments, the lender could foreclose on the property to get their money back.

property to get their money back.

Products like the Total Equity Plan, HomeLine Plan, HELOC (Home Equity Line of Credit) and the Secured Borrowing Account are becoming more common. They are marketed as simple, convenient and cheaper alternatives to traditional lines of credit. However, they are rarely marketed as a mortgage.

While various lenders have branded their secured products differently, the common factor is that they all require a mortgage.

While a lawyer is required when purchasing a home, the secured loans may be established directly with the lenders. Surprisingly, the mortgages can be granted without ever meeting with a lawyer or receiving legal advice.

As a result, people end up with mortgages they are unaware of.

Before signing up for your lender's latest loan product, ask if it is a secured loan.

If it is, you should consult your lawyer before you end up with a mortgage that you don't know you have.

An urban chicken coop?

HomeScape

Sylvia Putz

metronews.ca/homescape

In the old days, chickens wandering and scratching around the house may not have been such a shocker, but it certainly would be an eye-grabber in the city in this day and age.

Or would it? Recent news coverage in Toronto and other urban centres has shown that the idea of keeping chickens has gained a lot of interest in the city. It seems to be an idea whose time has arrived (again).

After decades of happily ingesting processed foods made of a long list of chemicals and other substances not encountered in nature, people are starting to ask questions about what they are eating.

One solution is to produce the food yourself. In the same way you know precisely what goes into the vegetables you grow in your garden, you would know what has been fed to your chickens, and how they are kept or treated.

But before you rush off to build your chicken coop, keep in mind that the notion of keeping chickens in the city is one that many communities are still wrestling with.

Check with your local government. If it is illegal in your city, and you would like it to be legal, get busy lobbying. Check online under urban chicken or city chicken — you'll find lots of allies.

Keeping chickens in urban areas has been gaining a lot of interest as of late.

Cities such as Guelph, Brampton, and Niagara Falls in Ontario, and Victoria and Surrey in British Columbia do allow urbanites to keep chickens provided certain rules are followed.

These usually have to do with the number of chickens you may keep, minimum lot size, or distance of the coop from lot lines. One rule that almost all chicken-friendly municipalities have is — no roosters.

This is because roosters try to impress hens by cockadoodling at all hours of the day, enough to drive you bonkers. Hens can cackle, but are much less vocal than crowing roosters.

Mostly, people who keep hens want eggs.

Slaughtering hens for the purposes of a good chicken meal is another benefit, but many urbanites who raise chickens tend to shy away from this. They get attached to the chickens, who can actually be quite companionable.

One thing is true of home-raised chicken. I can tell you from past experience that both the meat and particularly the eggs of home-raised chickens are delicious, and often bear very little resemblance to some of the much blander commercially-produced chicken and eggs.

I swear the best eggs I've ever eaten were bought from a ramshackle farm with wandering chickens near a cottage we used to visit — the yolks were bright yellow and the flavour unapologetically rich and flavourful.

If you are even remotely considering the idea of keeping chickens, rest assured that it involves work, and the whole affair is quite a commitment, as anybody who has ever been exposed to livestock can tell you.

Multifest gets bigger, better

Family-friendly event features music, food

RICHARD WOODBURY
for Metro Halifax

The Nova Scotia Multicultural Festival is getting even better this year.

Besides top-notch entertainment and amazing food, the festival will feature Grammy and Juno-winning entertainment, it's going green and it will be more family friendly.

"It's gonna be big," says communications co-ordinator Rae-Ann Kublick. "It's gonna be a full three days."

Tomorrow night is the Supershow, a first for the festival. It is a concert hosted by local musical group MIR and will feature performances by Grammy-winner Paula Cole, best known for her songs Where Have All the Cowboys Gone and I Don't Want to Wait. Also on the bill are Juno winners Divine Brown and Sarah Slean.

Grupo Chile — pictured above and top right — will be at the Nova Scotia Multicultural Festival this year.

"This is the first time we've had such big names," says Kublick.

She says a conscious effort was made to go green this year.

"This year, we're trying to go with everything compostable — plates, cups, spoons, straws."

This won't cost the vendors extra money. If the vendors choose to order their tableware through the festival, organizers will cover the price difference for the bio-degradable tableware.

It will cost the festival more money, but it feels it has a responsibility to be more eco-friendly, says Kublick.

Key information if you plan on going

• When: The Supershow is Friday and the traditional festival days will be on Saturday and Sunday.
• Times: Gates open at 4 p.m. on Friday and the Supershow starts at 8 p.m. and runs until midnight. On Saturday, the festival runs from 10 a.m. to midnight. On Sunday, it's 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

• Festival day passes for Saturday or Sunday: Adults, $6; youth/student/senior, $5; child (6 to 12), $2; under 5, free; family pass (two adults and two children under 12), $14.
• Supershow ticket prices: Advance, $44.75 (includes admission for one child under 12 accompanied by an adult); gate, $40 (also includes admission for one child under 12 accompanied by an adult). Note: Ticketholders with concert wristband have free access to the multicultural festival on Saturday and Sunday.

• For more information about the festival, go to multifest.ca/events.html

Nadira will be performing at the festival this year.

"At the end of the day, it does reduce the amount of garbage and refuse that's going to go to the landfill."

The festival is the largest of its kind in Atlantic Canada and is expected to attract around 20,000 people this year.

Saturday and Sunday will be the traditional multicultural festival days with musical performances, dance performances, workshops, arts and crafts, and children's activities.

And of course, "There'll be the ever popular food tent, which always gets rave reviews," says Kublick. Dance groups from across the world will be present, including groups from Brazil, Algeria and India. This is in addition to dance groups from Nova Scotia who represent different cultural groups within Nova Scotia.

The festival will also be a little more family-friendly this year with the introduction of a family tent, says Kublick.

"If your kids get tired or you need to feed a baby or change a diaper, there's going to be facilities there where you can stop and relax."

Beanstalk gets a facelift

JON TATTRIE
for Metro Halifax

A 1930s "gangsta" version of Jack and the Beanstalk, a love-scorning man annoyed to find true love, and a grisly tale of vaulting ambition make up Shakespeare by the Sea's summer season this year.

Conceived of by director Amos Crawley and written by SBTS, Jack and the Beanstalk-Market updates the classic children's tale for this year's family show.

"We've taken the irascible Jack and plunked him down in the midst of the 1929 stock market crash and surrounded him with goons, thugs and gangsters," explains Crawley. "(We've had) great fun exploring the particular lingo and characters of a world based on Al Capone's speakeasies and Jimmy Cagney's accent, all the while never losing sight of a boy named Jack who learns to grow up amid some very strange circumstances indeed."

Tom Smith (who plays Jack) and Caitlin Stewart (who plays Molly, the giant's wife) in Jack and the Beanstalk-Market.

Elizabeth Murphy, the veteran artistic director of SBTS, is taking the helm to direct Shakespeare's Love's Labour's Lost. Shakespeare has a young king and three friends sign a pact swearing off women and fun in the name of higher learning.

"All goes well for about 10 minutes, until the Princess of France and her entourage of beauties arrive on serious business," Murphy says. "The world becomes a riot of nonsense and miscommunication while the concept of honour is altered to suit the moment."

Jeremy Webb, who won a Merritt Award for his portrayal of Iago in SBTS's Othello last summer, is back with the Point Pleasant Park company.

Teams from last year's Manulife Dragon Boat Festival race against each other on Lake Banook.

Race raises money

JON TATTRIE
for Metro Halifax

The Manulife Dragon Boat Festival on Lake Banook next month is the perfect way to have a great time for a great cause, says Sports Nova Scotia CEO Jamie Ferguson. The annual event raises money for the Nova Scotia Amateur Sport Fund.

"That helps support our athletes and provides funding for increased opportunities for participation for people of all ages and ability levels," he says, noting sports are a key part of physical and emo-if you go...

• This year's Dragon Boat Festival will take place from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sat., July 11, on Lake Banook in Dartmouth. To learn more or get involved, go to dragonboat.halifax.ns.ca, email dragonboat@sportnovascotia.ca or call 425-5450.

11, provides the boats; experience is not required. Teams of 20 people, plus a drummer, paddle dragon boats down the lake in a series of fun and friendly races. Organizers say dragon boats are very stable, and the races only last a minute or two, making it a perfect event for everyone, even a team of beginners.

"It's a fun event that people can take part in at any level," Ferguson adds. Corporate support is a big part of the day. "The feedback we get from those companies is that it's a great opportunity to get a bunch of their staff together. Outside of the race, it's a real festival atmosphere," he says.

Diane Norris, executive director for Boyne Clarke Barristers & Solicitors, has been on the legal boat since the festival began. Previously, the law firm sent 14 members to a war canoe challenge. "We tipped in the canoe. In May. It wasn't fun," she laughs. "You don't tip in the dragon boats."

That's just one reason she loves it. "It is a team-building thing," she explains, saying staff from all levels gets to mix during the race and the months of fundraising that precede it. Boyne-Clarke has been the top corporate fundraiser for the last two years, pulling in more than $11,481 last year.

"We don't look the best out there, but everyone has fun," Norris says.

Festival for every music lover

RICHARD WOODBURY
for Metro Halifax

Don't be mistaken, the name might be the Atlantic Jazz Festival, but there'll be music for everyone.

"We do have a lot of music for every music lover," says Laura (Lulu) Healy, the artistic director for the festival.

"There are so many kinds of different jazz music in the festival that people can find something that whether they think they like jazz or not, they'll be able to find something that they really love listening to."

Over the course of the nine-day festival (which runs from July 10-18), there will be more than

Laura (Lulu) Healy.

Blues guitarist Joe Louis Walker, left, and saxophonist Kenny Garrett are just two of the featured artists who will be performing at the Atlantic Jazz Festival this year.

100 shows spread over about 10 venues.

The big difference for this year's festival is there are bigger marquee artists than in previous years, says Healy.

One of the featured acts will be saxophonist Kenny Garrett, who Rolling Stone magazine once said "plays with the kind of clarity, strength and personality that bespeaks experience mated with wisdom." He's played and recorded alongside legends such as Miles Davis, Herbie Hancock and Elvin Jones.

Another star attraction is blues guitarist Joe Louis Walker, who Rolling Stone once said "has established himself as one of the most talented members of the new generation of blues musicians brought up on a hybrid diet of Chicago blues, pop gospel and classic soul and rhythm & blues." Walker has recorded with diverse artists such as BB King, Ike Turner and Huey Lewis.

Part of the mandate of the festival is to promote local talent, says Healy. More than 350 local musicians will be performing, including Garrett Mason who will be performing with Walker.

"It's a good chance to see what kind of talent we have in Nova Scotia as well," says Healy.

Another big change from previous years is the introduction of green initiatives. The festival is partnering with the Ecology Action Centre to help make the event greener.

Gone will be plastic disposable beer cups and in its place, bio-degradable cups will be the new container of choice for cold suds. Other green initiatives will include using reusable cloths for tables rather than disposable paper ones. There will also be a bike corral on hand to encourage transportation to and from the events on bikes.

Fun with festivals

Something for everyone this summer

RICHARD WOODBURY
for Metro Halifax

You can catch Gene Simmons and KISS at Halifax Commons on July 18, or head to the waterfront to see some fireworks on July 1.

This is the summer of music in Halifax, with international superstars such as KISS coming to town. But there are also lots of events with a down-home Nova Scotia feel as well. Here's a guide of the things you should know about happening in Halifax this summer.

Music

JOEL PLASKETT: A free Plaskett concert might sound like "Wishful Thinking," but it isn't. What better way to celebrate being Canadian than seeing a free concert headlined by Plaskett. July 1, Alderney Landing, Dartmouth waterfront.

VIRGIN FESTIVAL: Canadian rock icons The Tragically Hip and American punk rock icons The Offspring will be headlining Virgin Festival's first foray into Halifax. July 4, Citadel Hill.

HRM FREE SUMMER CONCERT SERIES: HRM puts your tax dollars to use and presents eight concerts. Some of the performers include Joe Murphy & The Water Street Blues Band and Mike Cowie's 010. Various Thursdays and Saturdays beginning July 4 to Sept. 5, various locations.

KISS: It's been 32 years since KISS rocked Halifax, but the show will be worth the wait. July 18, Halifax Commons.

Festivals

CATCH: THE NOVA SCOTIA SEAFOOD FESTIVAL: If seafood is more your thing, then this is the place to be. The festival will be a showcase of Nova Scotia seafood and the latest culinary trends. June 27 and June 28, Cunard Centre, 961 Marginal Road.

ST. ANTONIO'S LEBANESE FESTIVAL: It's pretty much the Lebanese version of the Greek Fest. Enough said. July 9-12, Olympic Community Centre, 2304 Hunter Street.

TALL SHIPS: The harbour will be taken over this summer by 40 to 50 tall ships visiting from across the world. Don't miss checking out these beautiful and historic vessels. July 16-20, Halifax waterfront.

HALIFAX PRIDE FESTIVAL: Pride will once again take over Halifax this summer. Events include the pride parade, the Dykes vs. Divas ballgame and the mayor's proclamation and flag raising. July 19-26, various locations.

ALFRESCO FILMFESTO: The popular outdoor film festival is moving into new indoor digs this year, so a rain-out is no longer possible. Mamma Mia! The Movie will be the first film screened and the series will end with Pulp Fiction. Weekly starting July 24 until Aug. 28, 9 p.m., Pier 20, Marginal Road.

Workshops

VENUS ENVY: Why not brush up on some sex-ed? Summer workshops offered include Erotic Talk — Talking Dirty for Women and Going Down: A Guide to Fellatio. Various dates,

Sports events

AILEEN MEAGHER INTERNATIONAL TRACK CLASSIC: Cheer on the local talent as they compete against other top Canadian talent, as well as American and Caribbean athletes. Don't miss the "Geezer Mile," open to participants 50 and above. July 1, Huskies Stadium on Tower Road.

Museum exhibits

THE CANOE: A CANADIAN CULTURAL ICON: Find out "how the history, culture, society and economy of Canada are intertwined with the unique qualities of the canoe." Until Sept. 7, Pier 21, 1055 Marginal Rd.

PILES OF BIRDS: THE FOLK ART OF BARRY COLPITTS: Check out the wood carvings of West Jeddore native Barry Colpitts. To July 26, Craig Gallery, Alderney Landing.

CIRCUIT BENDING WITH ADAM KELLY: "Circuit bending is the intuitive and experimental short-circuiting of electronic instruments to create new sounds," says the Art Gallery of Nova Scotia's website. Join Adam Kelly and learn how to circuit bend with second-hand electronic keyboards. June 28, 1-4 p.m., Art Gallery of Nova Scotia, 1723 Hollis Street. (This event is aimed at children 8 and above.)

SALT ESSENTIALS: It's caused wars, served as a form of currency and was at the forefront of the industrial revolution. Learn more about salt. July 11 to Oct. 1, Nova Scotia Museum of Natural History, 1747 Summer Street.

Fireworks

CANADA DAY FIREWORKS: No introduction needed. July 1, 10 p.m., Halifax waterfront.

Drama debut

Ryan Reynolds explores his dramatic side

By DENIS SEGUIN
Contributing Writer

Ryan Reynolds has the same handsome blandness that makes actors like Greg Kinnear and Josh Hartnett a canvas for great directors like Paul Schrader and Ridley Scott. But, unlike these fellows, Reynolds hasn't worked with the best of directors since launching his career, as an adolescent, with a role in the Nickelodeon teen soap opera Hillside. At 19, he left Vancouver and moved to Los Angeles, where he eventually landed a part in Two Guys, a Girl and a Pizza Place. Since then, he has not made a name for himself so much as an impression. At 32, with some 20 features under his belt, Reynolds is still referred to as "a relative newcomer." But that's better than "former fiancé of Alanis Morissette" or "husband of Scarlett Johansson."

With his latest film, Fireflies in the Garden, things are looking up: The film isn't great, but Reynolds is great in it. Fireflies is the story of a deeply dysfunctional family. Reynolds' character, Michael, is on his way back to the Midwestern town where his mother (Julia Roberts) is finally graduating from university. But before he can see her, she is killed in a car accident. "This is the first time I've done a straight drama," says Reynolds. "The subject matter is pretty dark, but I felt like I was peeking through the curtain into a real home."

Alexisonfire grows up

Alexisonfire

Album: Old Crows/
Young Cardinals
Label: Dine Alone
Rating: ★★★★★

"WE ARE NOT the kids we used to be, stop wishing for yesterday." So goes the chorus of Old Crows, the opening track of Alexisonfire's fourth CD (note: it's yelled, not screamed). Yes, boys and girls, even emo-screamo kids have to grow up, sometime. That's the message deftly delivered here. The members of Alexisonfire were barely out of high school six years ago when they astonished an unsuspecting industry by scoring platinum with a searing debut CD without the help of a major label. Old Crows/Young Cardinals retains the edge of the old AOF while venturing into a maturer sound, more palatable to older ears. The vocal tension between Dallas Green, Wade MacNeil and George Pettit remains, but also produces some remarkable harmonies. Pettit in particular has traded his hardcore screams for an angry, throaty howl. And the social politics he enters in songs like Emerald Street are written with the keen eye of the observer. This is a band that's far stronger than it's individual parts and will hopefully be around for many years to come.

The Clik

Album: Dirty Kings
Label: Warner
Rating: ★★★★★

THE COVER OF this Toronto band's third album promises to deliver some nasty, below-the-belt punches. But the only real dirt here is a sexual tease. The Clik have streamlined into that of a slickly produced guitar-based power trio. The album comes out of the box bubbling over with hypersexual tension on the opening track Haunted and the title song Dirty King, but settles into the plodding comfort zone of '80s power balladry on Not Your Boy, Red and Blue and eventually slides into the graceful cabaret of Emily. The Clik are at their best when following the driving lead of bassist Jen Benton. Lead singer and guitarist Lucas Silveira has the potential for achieving major alt-rock divadom. He'll find it easier to achieve by serving up more dirt and less theatre.

Old Crows/Young Cardinals is the new album from Alexisonfire.

The Mars Volta

Album: Octahedron
Label: Warner
Rating: ★★★★★

THE MARS VOLTA'S heavy prog-rock riffs have sent fans of the band members' old band, At The Drive-In, running for the hills a long time ago. And while their fifth disc won't bring back all those followers, this might be the album that'll win over the critics. Octahedron is still loaded with meandering guitars, Rush-like vocals and incredibly complex arrangements, but it's more measured, and less over-the-top than their previous work. The instrumentation is looser, the vocals accessible, and the band's pretension has been dialled back.

Bryan Borzykowski/for Metro Canada

Ginuwine

Album: A Man's Thoughts
Label: Warner/Asylum
Rating: ★★★★★

IN THE MID-90s, a young Ginuwine broke onto the R&B scene with a steamy invitation to his personal Pony ride. Since then, the singer has put childish metaphors away, offering A Man's Thoughts on his mature sixth album. But sensible music can still be sensual, like the commitment-minded Last Chance, and Bridge To Love, a bumping duet with Brandy where he promises he's "tired of them games." His up-tempo numbers are less successful; despite reuniting with Missy and Timbaland, Get Involved falls flat.

Jason Richards/for Metro Canada

Regina Spektor

Album: Far
Label: Sire/Warner
Rating: ★★★★★

IT'S HARD TO figure Spektor out. The Moscow-born Bronx-raised pianist wowed fans with her dark songs on Begin to Hope, but here she's playing the pure pop princess. Equal parts cute, quirky and just plain weird, Far delivers an eclectic mix of jumpy piano numbers and indie Feist-like sounds. For the most part it works — Eet is a rollicking track with a wicked falsetto — but there are some flops, such as the plodding Machine, a tune too industrial for its own good.

Star power in Spacey's Invention

FILM Kevin Spacey will star in and produce Father of Invention, an ensemble comedy whose cast includes Heather Graham as a lesbian who sleeps with his character.

The story follows a humble inventor-turned-egomaniacal billionaire (Spacey) who spends eight years in prison when one of his inventions goes awry. Upon release, he is seeks to rebuild his reputation and fortune but finds that easier than salvaging his relationship with his family.

Craig Robinson (The Office) will play the husband of the former billionaire's ex-wife who now lives in his house and drives his car and helps Spacey get back on his feet after he gets out of prison.

Brazilian actress Camilla Belle (Push) will play his daughter.

Johnny Knoxville (Killshot) will play a store manager who hires Spacey's character after his prison stint.

Romantic gangsters return

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

These days movie gangsters only seem to come out of The Sopranos or Goodfellas mould. Most of the time we're limited realistic wise guys who are both charming and frightening.

That's all well and good — some of the best movies ever made have sprung from this style — but what ever happened to the romantic gangsters of old?

The classic '30s mobsters who spat out tongue twisting one-liners as fast as the bullets that came out of their Tommy guns; the guys who dressed in sharp suits, lived in the finest hotels, and went out with high-class dangerous ladies who could only be described as "dames."

With the release of Michael Mann's highly anticipated Public Enemies next week, it's time to look back at the best of the old school gangster flicks. From the original black and white classics that created the genre to the stylized modern mobsters movies that contemporary directors have made in honor of the past.

• SCARFACE (1931) Produced by Howard Hughes and directed by Howard Hawks, this nasty little movie was so shocking at the time that it was one of the primary causes of the start of film censorship. Al Pacino's instantly iconic performance in the 1983 remake may have eclipsed this Scarface in terms of brand name recognition, but original still holds up quite well.

• LITTLE CAESAR (1931) This film might not be as polished as the other founding mobster movies, but it wins points for having the most memorable gangster of the era. Edward G. Robinson's unforgettable nasal voiced crime lord was the go-to mobster voice in countless cartoons and parodies until Marlon Brando created The Godfather.

• THE PUBLIC ENEMY (1931) You simply can't have a list of classic gangster movies without at least one entry featuring James Cagney. His "top of the world ma" speech in White Heat might be one his most memorable onscreen moment, and The Public Enemy is his best movie by a mile.

• THE UNTOUCHABLES (1987) Brian DePalma brought back smart suited gangsters with style in this '80s blockbuster. Robert DeNiro's Al Capone made organized crime look more decadent than anyone else thanks to a massive costume budget. Just don't get in his way when he's clutching a bat and spitting out an eloquent David Mamet monologue about baseball. That'll get you into trouble.

• MILLER'S CROSSING (1990) The Coen Brothers brought back Tommy gun gangsters with their trademark style and self-conscious wit in this modern masterpiece. With character names like "the Dane" and loopy lines like "take your flunky and dangle," the Coen's classic seemed like the ultimate '30s gangster revival. Well, at least until Michael Mann headed to Chicago with Johnny Depp and Christian Bale.

Princess ready to rule

TV movie highlights Disney's rising star Lovato

IAN JOHNSTON
for Metro Canada

Disney's latest acting-and-singing megastar doesn't mind missing out on normal teen things like high school. At 17, she just wants to work.

"I'll relax when I'm older," says Demi Lovato, whose last couple of years have included a hit album, a sold-out tour with the Jonas Brothers, the Disney megahit Camp Rock, a sitcom (Sonny With A Chance), and the TV movie Princess Protection Program, airing this tomorrow on Family.

Oh, and there's also a second 2009 album, set for release next month, plus the inevitable Camp Rock 2.

"That's crazy, I know. But I'm doing it. Why not take advantage of it now if the opportunity is there?" says Lovato, who was in Toronto recently for the red carpet premiere of Princess Protection Program.

The comedy is a typically lighthearted fish-out-of-water Disney TV movie about a princess (Lovato) who befriends an American tomboy (Selena Gomez), while hiding out in a small southern town.

Princess is just Lovato's latest project with Disney, responsible for steering the careers of such tween sensations as Miley Cyrus and The Jonas Brothers. Lovato isn't as famous as all that — yet — but she's getting there. Lovato says she's comfortable with fame and being a role model for kids.

"I knew going into Camp Rock I'd become a role model. But I want people to know I'm growing up right in front of you. So I'm going to make mistakes. I want to be a role model for what I do or overcome — not being perfect."

Princess teams Lovato

Demi Lovato returns to Disney with the TV movie Princess Protection Program.

with her longtime friend Gomez, another rising Disney star best known for the series The Wizards of Waverley Place. The pair first met as seven-year-olds in Dallas at, believe it or not, a casting call for The Barney Show.

"She was wearing a red ribbon in her hair, and turned around, and asked me if I wanted to colour with her," recalls Gomez. "I think Disney really likes our friendship because it's honest and genuine. So they wanted to capture that on screen."

Lovato agrees, saying Disney is very particular with the projects it chooses for its young stars.

"They're very hands-on. Very careful. Because they have a large audience that's bigger than others that's very family-oriented. They have to be careful."

Princess Protection Program airs tomorrow on The Family Channel

Daniel Craig

Craig in talks to join psych-thriller

CASTING Daniel Craig can shake, but can he stir?

The latest James Bond has proved a critical and commercial success in his two turns in the iconic role, for Casino Royale and Quantum of Solace. But he has been deliberate in choosing his next live-action role.

Now comes word he is in early talks to star in Dream House, a psychological thriller to be directed by Irish filmmaker Jim Sheridan for indie producer Morgan Creek.

In the David Loucka script, Craig would play a man who moves his family to an idyllic small town, only to find his house haunted by its former inhabitants, who were murdered there.

The Dolphin Dealer

People love dolphins — watching them perform at marine parks, swimming with them or just watching "Flipper." And that's made Chris Porter a lot of money. This 2008 documentary chronicles four years in the life of Porter, who captures and sells dolphins to marine parks and resorts. He says he's strengthening the bond between dolphins and humans; his detractors say he's exploiting the animals. This could get ugly ... and does. 8 PM on CBC

What's life without Brad?

SOULMATES Angelina Jolie admits she couldn't imagine life without Brad Pitt. "I don't like being without him. I don't love being alone any more," she told Britain's OK magazine.

"He's amazing. He's a really dedicated father. I feel very blessed that every day I wake up and I live

Jarret calls the whole thing off

HEARTBREAK Model Rachel Hunter has split from her ice hockey player fiancé Jarret Stoll, the U.K.'s Daily Mail reports. Ostensibly, Stoll ended the relationship in person — but the would-be groom informed wedding guests via email, popeater.com reports.

Stoll, 27, apparently did not provide a reason for the cancellation to the guests — or the bride. A friend of the model told The Sun, "She is absolutely devastated. Everything was in place for their wedding — she had the venue, the designer dress, the guest list.

for the cancellation to the guests — or the bride. A friend of the model told The Sun, "She is absolutely devastated. Everything was in place for their wedding — she had the venue, the designer dress, the guest list.

"She has absolutely no idea why Jarret has done this. It sounds like it could be a classic case of cold feet. He is a fair bit younger than her."

Stoll, who is 12 years Hunter's junior, proposed to Hunter last year after they'd been dating for two years. The wedding was planned for August 2009.

Chris kicks into career-saving mode?

DAMAGE CONTROL Chris Brown won't go to jail for assaulting Rihanna, but the question now is whether his plea-bargained penalty — community labour, probation, domestic violence classes — will reform his behaviour and save his career, people.com reports.

Brown reached a deal with prosecutors in exchange for pleading guilty to felony assault — and some experts say the R&B star is already off to a good start.

"In accepting a plea bargain, you're accepting responsibility for your behaviour," said New York City clinical psychologist Jeffery Gardere. And by taking the court-mandated classes, Brown will be forced to face the issues that led him to become violent in the first place. "Part of those classes is talking about what happened as well as learning what your actions can do to victims and to yourself," he said.

While it remains to be seen how the singer handles his anger, living in the public eye may serve as an extra deterrent.

rent. What may be harder for Brown — once known as a good boy — is rehabilitating his image.

"A song with the proper lyrics and melody can heal wounds," explained former record label executive Charlie Walk, president and CEO of CWE Media, a multimedia entertainment company. "If he apologizes through song, that may be enough to take him where he needs to go."

Metro Recipe of the Day

Spicy Pork Burgers with Guacamole

INGREDIENTS:

- 3 tbsp (45 ml) canola oil
2 cloves garlic
1 small onion
2 fresh red or green chili peppers
1 tsp (5 ml) ground coriander
1 tsp (5 ml) ground cumin
Small bunch of cilantro
1 lb (450 g) ground pork
1 small egg
Salt and black pepper
1 lemon or lime
1 large avocado

METHOD:

- Heat 1 tbsp (15 ml) canola oil in small frying pan. Peel and crush 1 clove of garlic, peel and finely chop onion, add to pan and fry until soft.
- Rinse and finely chop fresh chili peppers, including seeds. Set half aside for guacamole and add remainder to onion. Stir in spices and fry gently 3 minutes, or until mixture is soft but not browned.
- Rinse, dry and roughly chop enough cilantro leaves to give 2 tbsp (25 ml) and add half to reserved chili peppers. Put rest of chopped coriander into large bowl and add fried onion mixture, pork, egg, salt and pepper. Wash wax from lemon or lime, finely grate rind into bowl and stir mixture, which should be slightly soft.

4. Heat remaining oil in large frying pan. Divide mixture into four and pat each piece into fairly flat burger. Fry over moderate heat 5–6 minutes per side, until cooked through.

5. For guacamole, squeeze juice from half lemon or lime and put into bowl with reserved chili peppers. Peel remaining garlic clove and crush into bowl. Halve and pit avocado, and scoop flesh into bowl. Season, then mash together well.

6. Drain burgers on paper towels and serve with guacamole and corn chips or soft tortillas.

ARIES

MARCH 21-APRIL 20

You'll feel a lump in your throat when you hear a hard luck story today. Being an Aries, you'll also want to do something practical to help.

LIBRA

SEPT 23-OCT 23

Your efforts in the next few days will bring amazing results — just don't worry you can't live up to others' expectations. You'll surpass them.

TAURUS

APRIL 21-MAY 21

Your smooth-talking ways will come to your rescue today, especially on the work front where you may have to say nice things to stay on good terms.

SCORPIO

OCT 24-NOV 22

A positive attitude will bring positive results today. A trip outside your usual neighbourhood will open your mind and could even bring romance.

GEMINI

MAY 22-JUNE 21

You may be a fun-loving type but if you get carried away in the next few days the bill may be bigger than expected. Make sure others pay their share.

SAGITTARIUS

NOV 23-DEC 21

Few things happen that are not part of a wider plan. If you can internalize that thought you will never again worry about minor setbacks.

CANCER

JUNE 22-JULY 22

Someone seems to think they can tell you what to do, but you have no intention of dancing to their tune like a puppet. Cut the ties and set yourself free.

CAPRICORN

DEC 22-JAN 20

What pleases the love of your life pleases you too, but don't let that blind you to the fact that not all your needs and desires coincide.

LEO

JULY 23-AUG 23

You enjoy being the centre of attention, but you won't be in the mood for socializing today. You don't have to make an effort if you don't really want to.

AQUARIUS

JAN 21-FEB 18

You'd do anything for anyone, loved one or stranger, but that can make you a target for less honest types. Don't let them exploit you.

VIRGO

AUG 24-SEPT 22

Someone will try to embarrass you today but they'll only succeed if you allow yourself to feel guilty about what you have done.

PISCES

FEB 19-MARCH 20

The sun in Cancer at this time of year makes all things possible, so why are you trying to go back and change outcomes that have already occurred?
